HUMMUS

Hummus is a creamy mixture of chickpeas blended with tahini sesame paste. Hummus is a spread originated from Lebanon. It is extremely popular in the Middle East - in the Arabic, Jewish and Caucasian cuisines. Nowadays hummus is spread worldwide especially by vegans and vegetarians. Hummus:

- does not contain cholesterol because of its vegetable origin,
- contributes to reinforce the immune system because of content of vitamin B6 and Folic acid,
- is a valuable source of fiber (more than 3 g per 100 g) that improves the work of digestive system (especially peristalsis) and helps with weight loss,
- is rich in polyunsaturated fatty acids (omega-3), derived from sesame oil and rapeseed oil. These polyunsaturated fatty acids contribute to regulate a proper functioning of the nervous system and reduce cholesterol,
- has a low glycemic index - which is very important for diabetics.
